The program was tested with singular and multiple files, including - (dash) both by itself and within multiple arguments, with no arguments, and with arguments that point to non-existent files. When handling standard input, it uses 0 as a file descriptor. This is an example of overloading.